Good practices

- Established in April 2016, the Research Center for the New Nagasaki Studies is undertaking measures aimed at achieving new university evolution as a research organization that combines the university's founding principles, mission, goals, and educational objectives. These initiatives are worthy of evaluation.
- As part of extra-curricular activities utilizing the university's founding principles and characteristics of the Foreign Languages Department, students act as volunteer interpreters for various events and attend to overseas distinguished guests at Nagasaki's annual Peace Memorial Ceremony. These initiatives are worthy of evaluation.
- The university has implemented mechanisms whereby self-inspections and evaluations are carried out every academic year, and the results are reflected in the university's business plan and budget formulation for the following academic year. These initiatives are worthy of evaluation.
- With regard to specific items related to educational quality assurance based on the three policies, internal educational quality assurance is functional, with the university carrying out assessments, inspections, and evaluations on each of three levels (university overall, degree programs, course subjects) and reflecting the results in educational improvements. These initiatives are worthy of evaluation.
