Good practices

- A lot of staff who have experience of overseas study or are former international students work at the Center for International Education and Exchange (CIEE), and the fact that they are enthusiastically striving to promote exchange between Japanese and international students is worthy of evaluation.
- With regard to the graduation theses that students are encouraged to write and the compulsory master's theses, when international students attempt to write them in Japanese, in addition to the usual graduation theses instruction and proofreading and instruction in Japanese expressions in master's theses given by the faculty in charge of the Japanese language course, the CIEE provides assistance by a Japanese SA and international student SA. This learning and class instruction support for international students and the promotion of exchange between students are worthy of evaluation.
- The university conducts a free-of-charge special S Course for those aiming to pass difficult state examinations, and administers selective examinations to manage the course. The concurrent implementation of both regular classes and enriched support is worthy of evaluation.

Recommendations for improvement

- With regard to the procedures for disciplinary action against students in Article 26, Paragraph (5) of the Regulation for Enforcement of the School Education Act, although Regulations on Disciplinary Action have been stipulated, the right to change or abolish them lies with the Board of Directors. Since the President cannot be said to stipulate them, this point requires improvements.
