Good practices

- The university adopts a double learning and class instruction support system consisting of Specialized Seminars and the C-Navi Further Education Research Seminars, and from the first to fourth year of their study the students are provided with meticulous instruction with a low student-teacher ratio. This initiative is worthy of high evaluation.

Recommendations for improvement

- The university's procedures for punishment for students are stipulated in the Miyazaki Sangyo-keiei University Regulations Concerning Disciplinary Action Against Students, but the authority for their revision or abolition lies with the Board of Directors and it cannot be said that the President has stipulated procedures. Improvements are required.
- As the Health Committee is not holding regular meetings in violation of the Health Management Regulations, and no inspections of the workplace by an industrial physician are conducted, improvements are required with regard to the regular holding of committee meetings in line with the Health Management Regulations, on-site inspection by the health manager and an industrial physician, and the implementation of health management in the workplace.
