Good practices

- The faculty members are constantly informed about the state of solicitations for external research grants and encouraged to eagerly apply for them, and through the General Council meetings each month at which responses are made by reporting and inspecting the state of adoption or rejection for these, as well as analyses and individual specific instruction for those whose applications for Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research were unsuccessful, the university is steadily building up a record of acquiring external funding including Grants-in-Aid for Scientific Research. These efforts are worthy of evaluation.
