Good practices

- The college sets targets related to community-oriented education and research in not only specialist training but also human resources training initiatives focusing on “Community contribution in the promotion of local residents’ health through health promotion and disability prevention rehabilitation,” as well as in their mid-term goals and mid-term plan. These initiatives are worthy of evaluation.
- In order to prevent students’ isolation and encourage the formation of study groups, the college holds social gatherings for each class, with the college covering the cost of these events. This initiative is worthy of evaluation.
